Mawj is a southern movement founded outside Yemen by Abdurrahman al-Jifri and other prominent leaders in 1994 after their defeat to oppose the unification of Yemen. Eleven members of the movement were allocated Saudi Riyal 650,000 (about $173238).

Among the most prominent leaders of the "Mawj" movement are the following:

Haidar Abu Bakr al-Attas: The last President of the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen from 1986 to 1990, and the first Prime Minister after the declaration of Yemeni unification between the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen and the Yemen Arab Republic in 1990, remaining in office until 1994. He is one of Yemen's most prominent politicians.

Abdulrahman Ali al-Jifri: One of the leading southern figures advocating for secession. He was appointed Vice President of the short-lived Presidency Council of the Democratic Republic of Yemen, which was declared on 21 May 1994. He was also the leader of the National Opposition Front, the opposition group that briefly fought and lost the war in 1994.
